Dispute management process in the Communication Guideline

- 1. Do participants agree with the proposal for NTESMO to review the dispute management process and fees after twelve months operations?

Yes, Jacana Energy agrees that NTESMO should review the dispute management process and fees after twelve months of operations. Jacana believes that fees should be reviewed annually and that the dispute management process should be reviewed on a cyclical basis.

- 2. Do participants have a clear understanding from the CATS procedures of which data fields are the responsibility of each participant?

It is Jacana Energy's assumption that if a market participant causes a data error in a field of Jacana's responsibility, it is expected that the participant be responsible for rectifying the error and that the costs of doing so be borne by the participant that caused the error.

Jacana Energy accept the changes to the CATS procedures, noting that the DIRS, TIRS and WHOLESAL NMI classification codes are not used in the NT procedures which is now reflected in the marked-up version listed on the NTESMO Consultation site.

Although the 'Last Consumer Change Date' (LCCD) data item is listed in the CATS procedures as used in ALL jurisdictions, we note this field is only mandatory if a CR5056/5057 is raised, however, these CR's are not used in the NT procedures.

Jacana will not be adopting the LCCD data item.
